If there is clear instructions somewhere for the manual steps that must be done before pulling the trigger on the upgrade of Win10, I can follow them. I don't want to risk in bricks during the upgrade. Supposedly, for 30 days after the upgrade, I can return to Windows 7, but its no good if I can't get on the machine in the first place. If I have to stay on Windows 7, Ill run that, until the support is gone and then switch to Linux or something maybe dual boot until the material finally die. Ive seen complaints about wireless, keyboards, optical drives and other things does not work properly after the upgrade. PPerry57 HP only guarantees the compatibility of Win10 for machines manufactured after August 2013. HP is not no matter what timetable indicating when, or IF, they will produce drivers for older machines. This was known as switchable graphics card or hybrid. You have run using the Intel chip most of the time, but when you need additional graphics power, as in the game, the PC automatically switched over to the use of the AMD or Nvidia graphics chip. These drivers are not available from Intel, AMD or Nvidia. One way to tell if your PC has two different graphics chips is to look in under Graphics Device Manager.It is something known as the boot loader code. There is 100 MB format all that is necessary for Win7. But Win10 needs 350 MB and, in some cases, is NOT able to resize it on its own. A much better and more reliable way is to use Microsoft Media creation tool choose the upgrade this option now PC. Given that HP does not have drivers for your PC Win10, this limited functionality is the best youre going to get. HP does not actively write new drivers from Win10 for the old PC Win7.Problem is that, often, a cleaninstall does not recognize prior activation, even if it should. So, before doing the upgrade, follow these instructions on the community forums Win10 on creating a genuineticket.xml file If I hit enter 3 times, it give me the code to 56531731.
